This workflow was created by Jenkins itself. Now I would like to change the default behavior and let Jenkins decide what to execute. The new default behavior can be seen in this screenshot: This default behavior is also explained in the blue box: I want to do the opposite of this. I want to tell Jenkins what to run. How can I do that? I am using Jenkins ver. 2.100.3 on Ubuntu 14.04. A: The little link on the left just changes the Maven project's default. Jenkins is then left to decide what to run in the next build. If you want to do a full Maven job with custom tasks, you can just edit the job's configuration and add whatever steps you want to execute. Evaluation of an anterior active wrist splint. This study evaluated the efficacy of an anterior splint applied to the wrist in relieving symptoms of carpal tunnel syndrome. Thirty-eight wrists were treated with a hand splint consisting of a rigid acrylic splint, hinged over a thermoplastic covering. The splint was worn for two to four weeks by patients who had had symptoms of nerve compression lasting at least three months. A total of 23 of 37 wrists (61.1%) had relief of symptoms following splint application. However, 17 wrists (45.9%) recurred with recurrent symptoms and 14 (37.8%) were lost to follow-up. The cause of the recurrence of symptoms is discussed.Adsorption of Pb(II) and Pb(II) complexes on pyridine functionalized graphene oxide: effect of the structural modifications. Pyridine functionalized graphene oxide (py-GO) was prepared by microwave-assisted pyrolysis of graphene oxide (GO) in the presence of pyridine. The structural changes of GO, the py-GO and its complexes with Pb(II) were investigated by various techniques such as X-ray diffraction (XRD), X- 82157476af
